Course Description
This course analyzes historical events, cultural practices and social developments that have shaped contemporary Japanese society. The course examines four key areas of post-war intellectual discourse: atomic bomb literature, the portrayal of the occupation, and the aesthetics of war; the family, the work place and the competing identities arising from the post bubble economy; the myth of homogeneity and the shifting role of women and minorities; and the representation of otherness in literature and anime, including the semantics of the relationship between these two realms. Each of these four areas will be carefully examined through novels, film and published research. Class format includes formal lecturing, student presentation and extensive in-class discussion.

Student Learning Outcomes
After taking this course students will gain: 1) a nuanced understanding of key Japanese cultural concepts and contemporary historical and social concerns; 2) improved tools with which to analyze and interpret current issues in Japanese cultural and literary history; and 3) an advanced knowledge of representative literary works, cutting-edge scholarship and other forms of artistic expression such as film and anime that address contemporary cultural developments and social issues.

Student progress will be assessed with quizzes and a final research paper. Class participation and attendance will also be part of the assessment.
