Careful financial planning is an important part of preparing for your study abroad program. Consider the following:

- Financial Aid and Scholarships: Federal financial aid, some state aid, and most scholarships apply toward education abroad. Most countries will not allow you to work abroad while studying, so you should plan to have sufficient funds to cover your expenses without working abroad.
 - Applicable (in most cases):
 - FAFSA (Pell Grant, student loans, Parent PLUS Loan, etc.) and WAFSA.
 - WWU and study abroad program provider scholarships
 - U.S. government scholarships: Gilman, Freeman-ASIA, Boren, etc.
 - Guaranteed Education Tuition (GET), 529 prepaid tuition programs, and GI Bill (exchange and WWU Global Learning programs only)
 - Not Applicable
 - Tuition waivers
 - Work Study
 - Western Grants
 - WUE Scholarship
- Cost Effective Programs: If cost is a significant factor in your decision-making process, consider locations with a low cost of living.

Below, calculate your financial resources compared to the costs of studying abroad. Estimates are fine; if applicable, reference your Web4U financial aid tab to see how much financial aid you normally receive.
